DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(c), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(c) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on April 13, 2010 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Horng et al 2002/0174533 and Sato et al 5,992,004.

Horng discloses a method of forming a magnetically pinned reference layer comprising: providing a layer of antiferromagnetic (AFM) material (e.g. 13 in Fig. 6) having a central section that abuts a pair of opposing outer sections, the central section having a first top surface and the outer sections having second top surfaces (along sloping sidewall 66); and depositing a layer of hard bias material (e.g. 71, para [0026]), a part of which contacts only the second top surfaces, thereby forming the magnetically pinned reference layer, only a part of which is in contact with the layer of AFM material.

It is noted that the “hard bias” material of Horng is inherently “magnetic” such that it can be said to be a “layer of magnetic material”. As evidence of inherency, see Sato (at col. 8, lines 34+), which discusses that a layer of hard bias material (e.g. 4) is made of a “magnetic material” or hard magnetic material.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Horng et al in view of Heim et al 5,465,185.

Horng discloses the claimed manufacturing method as relied upon above in Claim 1. Horng further teaches an AFM coupling layer (e.g. 13) that is formed within a spin valve structure, but does not appear to mention that the magnetically pinned reference layer comprises a pair of ferromagnetic layers separated by and contacting, the AFM coupling layer.

Heim shows that in making spin valve structures, a magnetically pinned reference layer (e.g. 70) can be made of a pair of ferromagnetic layers (e.g. 72, 74) separated by and contacting, the AFM coupling layer (e.g. 73).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified the reference layer of Horng, by utilizing the pair of ferromagnetic layers and AFM coupling layer taught by Heim, to at least form an art recognized equivalent spin valve.

Response to Arguments

The applicant(s) arguments (filed in the response of March 12, 2010) with respect to Claims 1 and 3 have been considered, but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
